

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF INDIANA
INDIANAPOLIS DIVISION

JOHN DOE,

Plaintiff,

VS.

BUTLER UNIVERSITY,

Defendant.

1:22-cv-01828-SEB-MG

ORDER

This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's Motion to Proceed Under Pseudonym. [Filing No. 4.] Although Defendant has not opposed Plaintiff's motion at this time, the Court must independently determine whether the standard for anonymous litigation is satisfied. For the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff's motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff began his studies at Butler University ("the University") in the Fall of 2019. [Filing No. 1 at 1.] Plaintiff came out to his friend group as gay in the fall of 2020, and by spring 2021, the incidents giving rise to this litigation occurred. [Filing No. 1-2.]

As described by Plaintiff, he claims that on March 3, 2021, he and his former friend group participated in a "mediation" conducted by Butler student-employees, which was "emotionally devastating." [\[Filing No. 1-2.\]](#) A few days later, Plaintiff called his mother to detail the mediation, and claims this conversation was overheard by a student, J.F., who then disclosed this conversation to another student, B.P. [\[Filing No. 1-2.\]](#) Following this disclosure, Plaintiff contends B.P. filed a formal complaint with Butler University falsely alleging he had stalked J.F. in violation of Butler's Sexual Misconduct Policy. [\[Filing No. 1 at 2.\]](#) Plaintiff states that the stalking complaint alleges:

(1) Plaintiff utilized social media to socialize with his friends; (2) Plaintiff spent too much time in his friends' suite and did not request formal, advance permission to come to their suite on each occasion when they hung out (Plaintiff lived across the hall and would just knock on their door, instead); and (3) on a single occasion, while Plaintiff was in his friends' suite, he used J.F.'s bathroom when she was not home, without calling her first to ask for permission.

[\[Filing No. 1 at 2.\]](#) Plaintiff further claims that "J.F. utilized the false and baseless sexual misconduct complaint against Plaintiff for two improper purposes: first, as an opportunity to bully Plaintiff and enact retribution for his talking badly about her (to his mother), and second, as an avenue to request and receive academic accommodations for J.F.'s courses that semester—at least one of which, on information and belief, she had been failing." [\[Filing No. 1 at 3.\]](#)

The University investigated the stalking claim in March of 2021. [\[Filing No. 1 at 3.\]](#) Plaintiff claims the investigation conducted by the University was "a disorganized, general examination of Plaintiff's various friendships over his entire history at Butler and involved eleven student 'witnesses'". [\[Filing No. 1 at 3.\]](#) Further, Plaintiff claims that after months of forcing him to spend significant time, energy, and money participating in the University's investigation, the University tossed out its own investigation report and proceeding to the hearing without it, in violation of its policies. [\[Filing No. 1 at 4.\]](#)

In October 2021, after a live hearing, an independent adjudicator concluded that Plaintiff did not violate Butler's Stalking policy. [\[Filing No. 1 at 4.\]](#) However, Plaintiff claims that he had already suffered substantial harm by that point, through Butler's violations of its contractual obligations and seven-month adjudication process. [\[Filing No. 1 at 4.\]](#) Further, Plaintiff claims

Butler has taken no action against the students who bullied Plaintiff and filed false claims. [Filing No. 1 at 4.]

On March 17, 2022, Plaintiff filed his Complaint as "John Doe," alleging a breach of contract claim from the University's conduct throughout the investigation process and a claim of unjust enrichment. See generally [Filing No. 1.] Shortly after filing the Complaint, the Plaintiff filed the instant motion requesting leave to prosecute his case under a pseudonym. [Filing No. 4.] Defendant has not filed a response to the motion.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that all parties to a lawsuit be named. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 10\(a\) (providing that the "title of the complaint must name all the parties"); Fed. R. Civ. P. 17\(a\)\(1\) (requiring that an action "be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest"). A court may permit a party to use a pseudonym in extraordinary circumstances only—when the party demonstrates that his interests outweigh both prejudice to the opposing party if anonymity were permitted and "the rights of the public to have open judicial proceedings and to know who is using court facilities and procedures funded by public taxes." See Doe v. Village of Deerfield, 819 F.3d 372, 377 (7th Cir. 2016).

"The decision whether to allow a party to proceed pseudonymously is within the discretion of the court." Doe v. Purdue Univ., 321 F.R.D. 339, 341 (N.D. Ind. 2017); K.F.P. v. Dane County, 110 F.3d 516, 519 (7th Cir. 1997). The Court therefore "has an independent duty to determine whether exceptional circumstances justify such a departure from the normal method of proceeding in federal courts." Doe v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield United of Wisconsin, 112 F.3d 869, 872 (7th Cir. 1997). Courts within the Seventh Circuit generally consider several factors in their weighing of these interests, including, but not limited to:

The Court's weighing of interests necessarily is fact sensitive. To determine whether Plaintiff's case constitutes an exceptional circumstance in which pseudonym treatment is warranted, courts consider several factors, including, but not limited to:

(1) whether the plaintiff is challenging governmental activity or an individual's actions; (2) whether the plaintiff's action requires disclosure of information of the utmost intimacy; (3) whether the action requires disclosure of the plaintiff's intention to engage in illegal conduct; (4) whether identification would put the plaintiff at risk of suffering physical or mental injury; (5) whether the defendant would be prejudiced by allowing the plaintiff to proceed anonymously; and (6) the public interest in guaranteeing open access to proceedings without denying litigants access to the justice system.

Doe v. City of Indianapolis, Ind., 2012 WL 639537, at *1 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 27, 2012) (quoting EW v. New York Blood Center, 213 F.R.D. 108, 111 (E.D.N.Y. 2003); see also Doe v. Indiana Black Expo, Inc., 923 F. Supp. 137, 140 (S.D. Ind. 1996)). The Seventh Circuit also has noted that fictitious names may be used where necessary to protect the privacy interests of "children, rape victims, and other particularly vulnerable parties or witnesses." See Blue Cross & Blue Shield United, 112 F.3d at 872.

III. DISCUSSION

Plaintiff asks to proceed under a pseudonym because this litigation involves highly sensitive information, he is still a student at the University and is in fear of retribution and further bullying from the students, and the University will not be prejudiced if he uses a pseudonym. [\[Filing No. 4 at 2-7.\]](#) Defendants have not filed a response to Plaintiff's Motion.

The Court's weighing of interests necessarily is fact sensitive. To determine whether Plaintiff's case constitutes an exceptional circumstance in which pseudonym treatment is warranted, the Court will consider the following relevant factors: (a) whether Plaintiff is challenging governmental activity or an individual's actions; (b) whether Plaintiff's action requires disclosing information of the utmost intimacy; (c) whether Plaintiff's identification would place him at risk of suffering harm; (d) whether Defendants would be prejudiced by Plaintiff's continued anonymity; (e) the public's interest in guaranteeing open access to proceeding; and (f) whether Plaintiff's identity has thus far been kept confidential. Indiana Black Expo, Inc., 923 F. Supp. at 140.

First, the Court considers whether Plaintiff challenges "governmental activity or an individual's actions." Id. Generally, "where a plaintiff attacks governmental activity, for example a governmental policy or statute, the plaintiff's interest in proceeding anonymously is considered particularly strong," in part because "the government is viewed as having a less significant interest in protecting its reputation from damaging allegations than the ordinary individual defendant." Id. Plaintiff maintains that the Seventh Circuit has allowed pseudonyms in lawsuits against private entities where the subject matter concerns social stigma. [Filing No. 4 at 5 (citing Doe v. Butler University, Case 1:16-cv-1266, Doc. 9 (S.D. Ind. June 29, 2016)).] Here, Plaintiff is not bringing his Complaint against a public educational institution, but a private one. While it appears that there is no bar to pseudonym protection in litigations against a private university, Plaintiff is not challenging governmental activity but has availed himself of the public forum of a federal court to make allegations of a purported breach of contract against a private entity for which he seeks money damages. As such, this factor weighs against anonymity.

Second, "the types of personal intimate information justifying anonymity for litigating parties have typically involved such intimate personal matters as birth control, abortion, homosexuality, or the welfare rights of illegitimate children or abandoned families," Doe v. Merten, 219 F.R.D. 387, 392 (E.D. Va. 2004), as well as allegations concerning sexual relationships and sexual assault, Purdue Univ., 321 F.R.D. at 341, and religious beliefs, Doe v. Stegall, 653 F.2d 180, 186 (5th Cir. 1981). Here, Plaintiff argues that pseudonymity is appropriate because the facts of this case concern his sexual orientation which will be discussed as the underlying basis for his breach of contract claim against the University for failing to protect him from harassment and bullying. [Filing No. 4 at 6.] Courts in this jurisdiction and elsewhere have determined homosexuality to be a highly sensitive matter which qualifies for pseudonym protection. See Doe v. Gray, 2020 WL 1545887 (N.D. Indiana, April 1, 2020); Sunlust Pictures, LLC v. Does 1-75, 2012 WL 3717768 at *2; Doe v. Neverson, 820 F. App'x 984; Doe v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Rhode Island, 794 F. Supp. at 75; Doe v. Rostker, 89 F.R.D. 158. This factor weighs in Plaintiff's favor of anonymity.

Third, the Court considers whether "identification would put the plaintiff at risk or suffering physical or mental injury." Indiana Black Expo, Inc., 923 F. Supp. at 140. Here, Plaintiff argues revelation of his identity "would result in immense injury, the same kind of injury that Plaintiff endured for months at the hands of other students, and for which he was not given any protection by Butler University." [Filing No. 4 at 6.] Relevant to the third factor is "whether the injury litigated against would be incurred as a result of the disclosure of the plaintiff's identity." Purdue Univ., 321 F.R.D. at 342. Here, if Plaintiff is successful in proving that Defendant breached its policies and procedures from its conduct throughout the investigation, there is a chance that "the revelation of the Plaintiff's identity [in the course of this lawsuit] 'would further exacerbate the emotional and reputational injuries he alleges." Id. (quoting Doe v. Colgate Univ., 2016 WL 1448829, at *3 (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 12, 2016)). Accordingly, the third factor weighs in Plaintiff's favor.

Fourth, the Court considers whether Defendants "would be prejudiced by allowing the plaintiff to proceed anonymously." Indiana Black Expo, Inc., 923 F. Supp. at 140. Under this factor, "courts look at the damage to a defendant's reputation caused by the anonymous proceeding, the difficulties in discovery, as well as the fundamental fairness of proceeding in this manner." New York Blood Center, 213 F.R.D. at 112. Plaintiff argues that the University "is already aware of Plaintiff's true identity" and it would face no prejudice in litigating this matter if he is allowed to proceed under a pseudonym. [Filing No. 4 at 7.] Defendants have thus far, not presented an argument that they will be impeded in presenting their defense in this Court if Plaintiff is permitted to proceed anonymously. Accordingly, this factor favors Plaintiff.

Fifth, the court considers "the public interest in guaranteeing open access to proceedings without denying litigants access to the justice system." New York Blood Center, 213 F.R.D. at 111. Disclosure of a plaintiff's identity is the standard and pseudonymity is acceptable in only "exceptional circumstances." Blue Cross & Blue Shield United, 112 F.3d at 872. Because the public is entitled to openness in federal proceedings, the fifth factor weighs against a grant of pseudonymity.

Finally, the Court considers whether Plaintiff's "identity has thus far been kept confidential." Purdue Univ., 321 F.R.D. at 341. Plaintiff does not go into detail regarding this factor and provides no information regarding his anonymity in the investigation and adjudication proves that gives rise to Plaintiff's claims. However, it appears that Plaintiff's identity has been kept confidential thus far, so the sixth factor weighs in favor of a grant of pseudonymity.

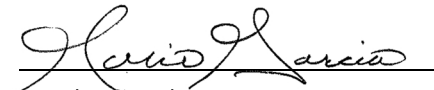

At this stage of the litigation, the Court finds that Plaintiff has overcome the presumption in favor of requiring a litigant's name to be a matter of public record by showing that the harm to Plaintiff exceeds the likely harm from concealment. However, the Court is mindful that over the course of litigation, circumstances could change the proper weight given to each factor. Therefore, the Court grants leave to Defendants to file a motion to reconsider due to changed circumstances.

IV.
CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff's Motion for Leave to Proceed Under a Pseudonym, [4], is GRANTED and ORDERS the parties to use the pseudonym "John Doe" for Plaintiff. The Court further ORDERS Defendants to refrain from revealing Plaintiff's identity.

The Court GRANTS LEAVE to Defendants to file a motion to reconsider if significant changes in circumstances or facts occur that alter the factors favoring anonymity.
